FOREWORD

First presented in February 1958, the exhibition Craftsmanship now has its second biennial showing, co-sponsored by the Southern California Designer-Craftsmen. In competition open to all craftsmen within a 125-mile radius, the work of 101 entrants was selected by an earnest and discriminating jury, who took quality of design and craftsmanship as their touchstone. Such was the level of work submitted that nearly one-third of the entries won acceptance by the jury.

The Museum takes privilege in presenting this second collection, all of it produced since the Craftsmanship exhibition of two years ago. Two enterprises scheduled for all week-end afternoons during the show will bring the exhibiting craftsmen into active participation — a series of ten demonstration-lectures covering a variety of crafts, and a Sales Bazaar, the latter staffed by S.C.D.C. members and all proceeds going to the craftsmen themselves.

Affectionate acknowledgments go to the Designer-Craftsmen's patient and most able exhibition chairman, Dextra Frankel. And to the selflessly devoted members of her committee, our grateful respects: William Enking, for design and installation of the show; Bernard Kester, Tom Ferreira and Ray Hein for assistance in installing; Bernard Kester and Laura Andreson, for arranging the demonstration-lectures; Lee Barkley, for planning the Sales Bazaar; Jay Lothian, in charge of entries; Mary Jane Leland, for records and publicity; Joseph H. Krause, for design of the prospectus, invitations and catalogue; Richard A. Petrie and Henry A. Evjenth, for photographs; and these for assistance at the jurying: Lee Barkley, Tom Ferreira, Charles Frankel, Bernard Kester, Mary Jane Leland, Brooke Morris and Norwood Teague.

Warm appreciation is expressed to our three jurors, with an added debt to Max Sullivan, who returned to lecture at the opening preview. A great contribution is made by those furnishing the ten demonstration-lectures. To the Southern California Designer-Craftsmen and to The Museum Association, our thanks for funds graciously given. And particular thanks to Brugger Fine Arts, who made their premises available for the assembly, jurying and dispersal of all material.

Within our Museum family, friendly help was given by George F. Brauer who made most of the photographs, as selected by the jury; John R. Quinn our designer-printer; the ladies of the Art Office; and our willing staff of carpenters and electricians, preparators and helpers.

—Gregor Norman-Wilcox

STATEMENT OF THE JURY:

The Jury for the second biennial exhibition of craftwork was greatly impressed by the large number of objects of high quality submitted for this important showing. For the most part, the entries were worthy of consideration piece by piece. The sum total effect of final judging brought the jurors to the unanimous conclusion that this exhibition makes a positive statement as to the place and direction of contemporary crafts in the Southern California area.

The largest number of entries was in ceramics which attests to the popularity of this medium. The seeming ease with which a potter produces a large number of pieces compared to the output of a cabinet maker or silversmith, does not in any way assure quality. And yet without question, the work in ceramics showed the widest range and greatest strength in design and execution.

On the other end of the scale, the work in metal was disappointing. True silversmithing, flatware or raised, was non-existent, and even the jewelry, while often well-executed, lacked that necessary affinity between the jewel and the setting.

In printed textiles there were some sensitive designs, but in woven textiles there were very few pieces that stood the test of the jurors except for rugs which were rich in texture and well-conceived as to final use.

There were several panels in various media which, regardless of size, might best be called architectural pieces, and of these, enamels and mosaics were noteworthy. In a somewhat related medium, the work in colored glass reflected a deep interest in color experimentation in transparencies.

Since work in practically all media was submitted, the exhibition reveals the very great diversity in the crafts. Many objects reflect the hours of painstaking labor expended and not always with the best results since some of the finest work, both in design and craftsmanship, is found in the most simply conceived and most directly executed pieces.

The jury is grateful for the opportunity to have considered so many fine works and wishes to share their conviction as to the future of the crafts and their excitement over this second biennial showing.
